Court Pick Stirs Passions

Confirmation fight looms as Bush taps conservative Alito

WASHINGTON | President Bush nominated Appeals Court Judge Samuel Alito to the Supreme Court on Monday, hoping to usher in a historic new era of judicial conservatism while ending a Republican divide that doomed an earlier pick.

Members of the Senate's Democratic minority signaled a potentially bruising confirmation battle ahead, with abortion a key issue. Sen. Harry Reid of Nevada, the party's leader, asked whether Alito was "too radical for the American people."

Bush, naming a replacement for Justice Sandra Day O'Connor four days after Harriet Miers withdrew her name, said Alito "has a deep understanding of the proper role of judges in our society." Within hours, Alito collected support from many of the conservative critics who had opposed Miers.

Liberal groups signaled they were ready to rejoin the fight. Alito's "ideological similarity to Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia has earned him the nickname 'Scalito,' said the Alliance For Justice, referring to the court's most outspoken conservative.

Whatever the outcome, Bush's choice marked a bid to shed his own recent political difficulties, including poor polls, high energy costs, the indictment of a White House aide in the CIA leak case, and the failure of Miers' nomination. DAVID ESPO (AP)

A Policy With Some Teeth in It

An Inverness, Scotland, girl who had teeth pulled was not allowed to take them home for the tooth fairy because the hospital classified them as "body parts," the Daily Record reported. Doctors removed several teeth from four-year-old Kimberley Cumming because of rotting. Her mother, Lorraine, said she had told her daughter the tooth fairy story so she would be less nervous about the procedure — and Kimberley had even gotten a special tooth box for the event. The hospital is now reportedly investigating the incident. (EXPRESS)

London fire and police officials were needed to free a man who was trapped for hours in the public bathrooms, Newsquest News Service reported. Edward Gee had gone jogging and stopped to use the restrooms when a city employee locked them up for the night. "What kind of idiot employee does not check a public toilet to see if anyone is in there before they lock it for the night?" Gee later said. He was able to yell for help to passersby, who alerted emergency services. Officials at first could not get a hold of someone with access to the keys and mulled cutting the bathroom door off. # Senators Prep for Battle Over Alito

Analysis: Conservative judge's record likely to enrage Democrats

WASHINGTON | Washington may soon get the battle royale the Senate braced for earlier this year.

By selecting conservative judge Samuel Alito for the Supreme Court, President Bush helped reunite his political base. Yet the nomination also is unifying Senate Democrats who had hoped a political moderate like the retiring Sandra Day O'Connor would be given the lifetime appointment.

The combination of Chief Justice John Roberts and Alito carries the potential of shifting the court to the right — something Republicans have longed for and Democrats have feared. Both sides quickly girded for what could be the most divisive battle of Bush's presidency, compared to the relative ease with which Roberts was confirmed a month ago.

Bush is seeking to regain his political balance after seeing his standing eroded by the insurgency in Iraq, rising fuel prices, Hurricane Katrina mistakes, the indictment of a top aide to Vice President Dick Cheney, and the failed Supreme Court nomination of Harriet Miers.

Three times during a brief meeting with reporters on Monday, Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., mentioned the importance of bringing the nomination "to an up-or-down vote." The time frame:

WHO IS SAMUEL ALITO?

- Born April 1, 1950 in Trenton, N.J.
- Education: Bachelor's from Princeton, 1972; Law degree from Yale, 1975.
- Experience: Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, 1990-present; U.S. attorney for the district of New Jersey, 1987-1990; deputy assistant to the U.S. attorney general, 1985-1987.

"The next several weeks."

"It makes a Democratic filibuster highly likely and I have no doubt that Frist will detonate the nuclear option," said Thomas Mann, a political scientist at the Brookings Institution. The "nuclear option" refers to a Republican effort threatened by Frist to change the Senate rules so that Democrats could not filibuster judicial nominees. TOM RAUM (AP)

Friends, Family Laud New Nominee

Alito said to be polite hard-worker with anti-abortion views

PHILADELPHIA | Samuel Anthony Alito Jr. doesn't spend all his time with his nose in a law book.

He's said to be a gourmet cook, interested in music, an ardent fan of baseball's Philadelphia Phillies.

He was born on April Fool's Day to a mother who was candid enough to tell the world he was upset that he didn't get the Supreme Court nod a month ago. He got it Monday.

Colleagues describe him as smart, hardworking, polite.

"Unlike many of the rest of us, he is actually capable of sitting at his desk for a long time and thinking about hard legal issues," says attorney Paul Fishman, who once ran Alito's criminal division at the U.S.

attorney's office in New Jersey.

Alito's mother, Rose, who will turn 91 next month, spent Monday fielding telephone calls from her home in Hamilton, N.J. "I'm so excited I can't even express myself," she said.

If confirmed, Alito would be the fifth Catholic on the Supreme Court. "Of course he's against abortion," his mother said, a comment supporters in Washington might wish she'd held back. (AP)

Calls for Shakeup Rebuffed

White House plans no major changes except new aides for Cheney

WASHINGTON | The White House on Monday rebuffed calls for a staff shakeup, the firing of Karl Rove and an apology by President Bush for the role of senior administration officials in the unmasking of CIA operative Valerie Plame.

Three days after the indictment and resignation of I. Lewis Libby, Vice President Dick Cheney's chief of staff, the administration said it would have to remain silent as long as there was an investigation of the leak and legal proceeding under way. Bush ignored reporters' questions during an Oval Office meeting with Italian Premier Silvio Berlusconi.

"We don't want to do anything from here that could prejudice the opportunity for there to be a fair and impartial trial," presidential spokesman Scott McClellan said.

Republicans and Democrats alike have urged Bush to begin remaking his presidency by bringing in fresh advisers with new energy to replace members of a team worn down by years of campaigning and governing. But administration officials said that was not in the works.

Cheney promoted two of his advisers to fill the jobs handled by Libby, his confidant. David Addington, who has been the vice president's legal counsel, was named chief of staff, while John Hannah, his deputy national security adviser, was named national security adviser. Both men have been on Cheney's staff for more than four years.

Addington

"There's no discussion of staff changes beyond the usual vacancies that occur or beyond filling the vacancy that the vice president did as well," McClellan said.

PHILADELPHIA | Commuters laced up their walking shoes, pedaled bicycles, squeezed into car pools and hitched rides Monday as a transit strike brought the city's buses, subways and trolleys to a halt.

No new talks were scheduled between SEPTA and the union, which represents about 5,000 employees. A second union, with 300 suburban transit employees, joined the strike. (AP)

'View Tax' Triggers Revolt in Rural N.H.

ORFORD, N.H. | The one-room cabin David Bischoff built in a cow pasture three years ago has no electricity, no running water, no phone service and no driveway.

What it does have is a wide-open view of nearby hills and distant mountains — which makes it seven times more valuable than if it had no view, according to the latest property assessment. He expects his property taxes to shoot up accordingly.

Bischoff and other Orford residents bitterly call that a "view tax," and they are leading a revolt against it that has gained support in many rural towns in New Hampshire.

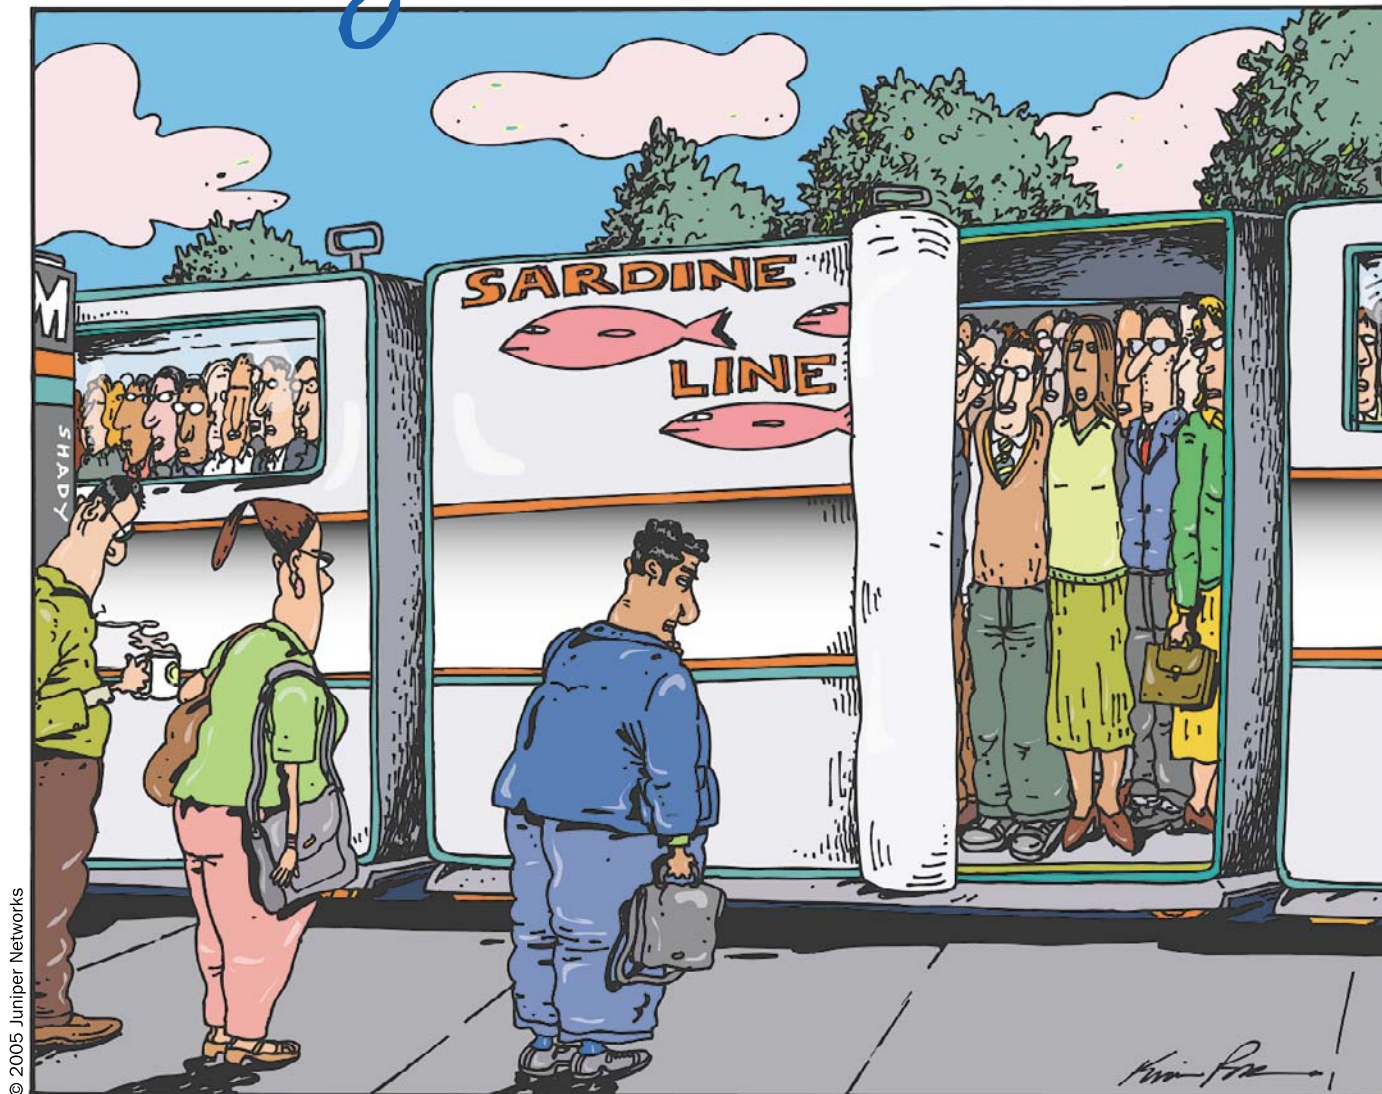

State officials say there is no such thing as a "view tax" — it is a "view factor," and it has always been a part of property assessments. But views have become so valuable in some towns that assessors are giving them a separate line on appraisal records.

One big reason the reassessment has alarmed townspeople in Orford and beyond is that housing prices are shooting up in New England because of an influx of vacation-home buyers and retirees willing to pay top dollar for beautiful views. (AP)

U.N. Council Warns Syria on Probe

Resolution presses Damascus to comply in Hariri investigation

UNITED NATIONS | A United Security Council warned a defiant Syria on Monday of possible "further action" if it doesn't cooperate with a U.N. investigation that has implicated top Syrian officials in the assassination of Lebanon's former prime minister.

But the U.S., France and Britain had to drop the explicit threat of sanctions to win unanimous support for the resolution at a rare meeting of the foreign ministers from most of the council's 15 members.

The three nations stressed they will press for tough U.N. measures if Syria does not comply fully with the probe into the killing of Rafik Hariri and 20 others.

The resolution requires Syria to detain anyone considered a suspect by U.N. investigators and let them determine the location and conditions under which the individual is questioned. It also would freeze assets and impose a travel ban on anyone identified as a suspect.

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice casts her vote to adopt the resolution.

Those provisions could pose a problem for Syrian President Bashar Assad. The Syrian leader refused a request from investigator Detlev Mehlis to be interviewed, and investigators also want to question his brother and brother-in-law.

Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa watched the vote at the council meeting. He then lashed out at Mehlis and the council for accusing Syria of committing a crime without evidence. (AP)

Ducks Tested for Bird Flu in Canada

TORONTO | Nearly three dozen wild ducks have tested positive for the H5N1 bird flu virus in Canada, officials reported Monday, but they said it was unlikely to be the strain blamed for more than 60 human deaths in Southeast Asia.

Dr. Jim Clark of the Canadian Food Inspection Agency said it would take at least a week to determine whether the flu found in 33 ducks from the provinces of Quebec and Manitoba was the deadly Asian H5N1 strain.

But it was unlikely to be the same strain because none of the wild ducks tested was ill, he said at a news conference.

The spread of H5N1 across the Eurasian land mass has health experts worried about the possibility of a human flu pandemic.

The World Health Organization says the H5N1 outbreaks in Southeast Asia have infected 121 people and caused 62 deaths in Thailand, Vietnam, Indonesia and Cambodia. (AP)

The approach of the harsh Himalayan winter, already marked by near-freezing temperatures, is bringing new misery to thousands of quake survivors living in tent cities. And they're the lucky ones — officials estimate 800,000 people have no shelter of any kind.

The United Nations warns of a second wave of deaths once winter kicks in if the estimated 3.3 million homeless do not get winterized tents, food and medical care.

Pakistan's President Gen. Pervez Musharraf pledged Monday to deliver 500,000 tents to quake survivors by the end of November.

Declaring that relief efforts are "proceeding quite satisfactorily," Musharraf blasted critics who have criticized the military for not moving quickly enough in the wake of the deadly Oct. 8 quake. (AP)

Bombings Kill 7 GIs in Iraq

U.S. death toll for October climbs to 92; Basra car blast kills 20

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Capping the bloodiest month for American troops since January, the U.S. military reported Monday that seven more U.S. service members were killed — all victims of increasingly sophisticated bombs that have become the deadliest weapon in the insurgents' arsenal.

Bombs also claimed a toll Monday among civilians in Basra, Iraq's second-largest city and the major metropolis of the Shiite-dominated south, which has witnessed less violence than Sunni areas. A large car bomb exploded along a bustling street as people were enjoying an evening out after the daily Ramadan fast. At least 20 were killed and about 40 wounded, police Lt. Col. Karim al-Zaidi said.

DEADLY ROUTE: A vehicle burns at the site of a large car bomb explosion in Basra, Iraq, on Monday. The blast on a busy street killed at least 20 and wounded 40 others.

Monday's deadliest attack against U.S. service members came in an area known as the "triangle of death." Four soldiers from the U.S. Army's Task Force Baghdad died when their patrol struck a roadside bomb in Youssifiyah.

The U.S. military death toll for October is now at least 92, the highest monthly total since January, when 106 American service members died — more than 30 of them in a helicopter crash that was ruled an accident. ROBERT H. REID (AP)

British Royals Embark on U.S. Visit

LONDON | Prince Charles, his wife, and a wardrobe full of dresses jet off to the U.S. Tuesday on a tour designed to celebrate trans-Atlantic ties, promote Charles' environmentalist causes — and test reaction to his new bride in a nation still smitten with the late Princess Diana.

The 56-year-old heir to the throne and Camilla, Duchess of Cornwall, will visit New York, Washington, New Orleans and San Francisco during the Nov. 1-8 tour, their first official overseas jaunt since marrying in April.

Britain's Prince Charles and his wife, Camilla, Duchess of Cornwall, will visit several cities, including Washington.

Aides hope the royal tour won't be eclipsed by memories of a visit in 1985 — when a radiant Diana danced with John Travolta at a White House dinner.

The prince's office says the trip is intended to recognize "the importance of the relationship between the two countries and their common bonds and shared traditions."

It is also part of a plan to win acceptance for the duchess, long reviled in the British press as the woman who broke up the royal romance. JILL LAWLESS (AP)

Thousands honor the woman who sparked civil rights movement

WASHINGTON | Linking hands and singing "We Shall Overcome," old friends and Washington's establishment remembered Rosa Parks on Monday as a quiet, gentle woman whose courage in the face of segregation helped inspire generations.

An overflow church crowd paid tribute to the woman whose refusal to give up her seat to a white man on a Montgomery, Ala., city bus 50 years ago helped galvanize the modern civil rights movement. The two-day farewell and "homegoing" in Washington also attracted tens of thousands who stood for hours for a glimpse of Parks' mahogany coffin in the Capitol Rotunda.

In a three-hour memorial service at historic Metropolitan A.M.E. Church on 15th Street NW, Parks was celebrated by political, religious and civil rights leaders and other luminaries who spoke of the example she set with a simple act of defiance.

"I would not be standing here today, nor standing where I stand every day, had she not chosen to sit down," said talk show host Oprah

Case Quits Time Warner's Board

Co-founder of AOL says he wants to focus on his new company

NEW YORK | Steve Case, a co-founder of America Online and one of the main architects of the disastrous AOL-Time Warner deal, said Monday he has resigned from Time Warner Inc.'s board of directors.

Case had relinquished the role of chairman two years ago, but remained on the media conglomerate's board of directors despite the opposition of shareholders angered by the fallout of AOL's purchase of Time Warner, which led to massive write-downs, shareholder lawsuits and a management purge.

Other key executives involved in the deal have already left the company, including former Time Warner CEO Gerald Levin and Bob Pittman, a former AOL executive.

Time Warner has agreed to pay a combined $510 million to settle shareholder lawsuits and regulatory charges that AOL fraudulently inflated its online advertising revenues and subscriber counts.

Case said in a statement that he was leaving to focus on growing his new investment company and to avoid any potential conflicts of interest. He also said he was pleased to see a "renewed focus" on AOL at Time Warner.

Ironically, after several years of being seen as an albatross around Time Warner's neck because of its declining dial-up subscriber base, in recent months AOL has become a coveted acquisition target among Internet companies such as Yahoo Inc. and Google Inc. as it taps into the boom in online advertising. ## FCC Approves Key Telecom Mergers

WASHINGTON | Regulators agreed Monday to approve SBC Communications' takeover of AT&T and Verizon Communications' purchase of MCI — deals that allow the biggest phone companies to grow bigger — but with conditions.

By 4-0 votes, the Federal Communications Commission approved the mergers with conditions that drew praise from rivals of SBC and Verizon.

Among them, the agency required that SBC and Verizon freeze for 30 months the wholesale prices they charge competitors to lease certain business lines. It also said the two companies had to guarantee for two years that they will sell their high-speed Internet access as a stand-alone service, so customers aren't forced to buy local phone service as well. Red Sox general manager Theo Epstein resigned Monday, surprising Boston and the baseball world just one year after he helped build the franchise's first World Series championship team since 1918. The team said in a statement that Epstein will continue working for several days to assist in the transition and prepare for the offseason. The Boston Herald, which first reported the news on its web site, said the Yale graduate has told associates that he may leave baseball, or at least take a year off. (AP)

A 'Defining Moment' for Redskins

Can the team bounce back from shutout in time for Eagles game?

REDSKINS | A 35-point victory followed by a 36-point loss has put the Washington Redskins at a crossroads. Which way is this team headed, for goodness sake?

They'll find out soon enough. One week after playing for first place — and getting pummeled 36-0 by the New York Giants in Joe Gibbs' worst loss as a coach — the rattled and battered Redskins (4-3) will be playing to avoid sole possession of last place in the NFC East on Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles.

"I think it's going to be a defining moment for this team, for this season," quarterback Mark Brunell said.

That's a strong pronouncement from a player who usually isn't into hype, but the entire team was in re-evaluation mode Monday after an embarrassing performance that highlighted weaknesses on both sides of the ball, left several key players battling injuries and exposed the emotional vulnerability of a team that had beat up on the awful San Francisco 49ers seven days earlier.

"We went out there and they got that long run, and after that, there was no enthusiasm," said defensive end Phillip Daniels, referring to Tiki Barber's 57-yard run on the first play from scrimmage.

UNDER REVIEW: Joe Gibbs tosses the flag to challenge a call in Sunday's loss to the Giants. Now the Redskins are left questioning themselves due to their poor play.

REDSKINS NOTES

- An MRI revealed cartilage damage but no sprain in the right knee of OT Chris Samuels, who hopes to play on Sunday.
- Gibbs wouldn't say if LB LaVar Arrington has earned a starting spot after the demotion of Warrick Holdman.
- With John Hall healthy, K Nick Novak could be cut this week.
- The Nov. 13 game against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers has been moved from 1 p.m. to 4:15 p.m.

Barber's 57-yard run on the first play from scrimmage. "It seemed like a deer in highlights. It was a lot of guys wondering who was going to make the play instead of going out and making the play."

Restoring the confidence will be up to Gibbs, who had previously been shut out only once — in a 1987 playoff game against the Giants — in his Hall of Fame career.

"I sat there all last night and was thinking about it," Gibbs said. "Can we do it? That's the first question. Are we good enough to do it? And so you go back and look at the seven games we played. Six of those games I'd say that we were good enough. ... That means we're probably capable of beating just about anybody, but also anybody can beat us." JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Wizards Lock Up Butler's Services

Forward signs 5-year extension to beat the deadline on new deals

WIZARDS | Caron Butler signed a five-year contract extension with the Washington Wizards on Monday, a move of stability for a player who has been with three teams as he starts his fourth NBA season.

The 25-year-old swingman, acquired with Chucky Atkins in the offseason trade that sent Kwame Brown to the Los Angeles Lakers, would have become a restricted free agent at the end of the season had he not signed a deal before midnight Monday.

"It's a great place to play — and a great place to stay also," said Butler, who has bounced from Miami to the Lakers to the Wizards since the Heat made him the No. 10 overall pick in 2002. "I fit in here. The offense fits me."

Butler started 77 games and averaged 15.5 points and 5.8 rebounds last year for the Lakers, but he will start the season as the sixth man for the Wizards after losing out in a three-way preseason competition for two starting spots. Antonio Daniels will open at shooting guard, and Jared Jeffries will be the small forward. (AP)

Rookie Practices For First Time Since Being Shot

WIZARDS | Rookie Andray Blatche practiced with the Washington Wizards on Monday for the first time since he was shot during an attempted carjacking. "I was really excited to be out there," Blatche said. "To just sit there and watch — it's been aggravating."

The 19-year-old, drafted in the second round out of South Kent Prep School in Connecticut, was shot at in September while riding in a car near his home in Alexandria, Va. A bullet went through his right forearm and the left side of his chest. (AP)

Musical Chairs to Start NBA Season

Jackson's back in L.A., Brown's in N.Y., but can either beat the Spurs?

NBA | Out on the West Coast, the NBA's Zen master has returned home from a yearlong sabbatical, accepting a task sure to disturb his implacable cool.

On the other coast, Brooklyn's wayward son finally has his dream job, moving into Madison Square Garden for the ultimate stop in a lifetime of wandering.

And in the heart of Texas, geographically smack-dab between the Lakers' Phil Jackson and the Knicks' Larry Brown, the San Antonio Spurs' Gregg Popovich is hard at work making sure the NBA's two highest-profile coaches don't win another championship ring.

So begins the league's 59th season, with the first tip Tuesday in Philadelphia. The summer was tinged by tragedy, but featured no revolutionary changes to the game — unless, like Tim Duncan or Allen Iverson, you believe it's a travesty to Four months before the new dress code caused a tempest in a T-shirt, labor peace was reached with a new collective bargaining agreement.

The league also has continuity on the court: Most of last season's title contenders should be strong again, and though plenty of teams shuffled their rosters, only a handful of marquee players changed teams.

But the marquee bosses got all kinds of attention, with new challenges for each of the only three coaches to win titles in the last decade.

Jackson had enough of his easy life signing books and making commercials, instead deciding to restore Showtime one triangle at a time in

3 BURNING QUESTIONS

- Happily Ever After? The last time Phil Jackson coached Kobe Bryant, he ended up in therapy. After a year apart, they are reunited with a Laker team that needs Kwame Brown to grow up.
- Spurs of the Moment? San Antonio is favored to repeat as champs thanks to the combo of Manu Ginobili and Tim Duncan.
- Dressed to Kill? Bets are on as to who'll be the first to ignore the dress code. Allen Iverson, Stephen Jackson and Tim Duncan have already decried it.

But from coast to coast, everyone is chasing San Antonio — which added cagey veterans Michael Finley and Nick Van Exel to a club that's already the favorite for its fourth title in eight seasons.

USC Regains Top Spot in the BCS

Va. Tech still trails at No. 3, Notre Dame in trouble for a top bowl

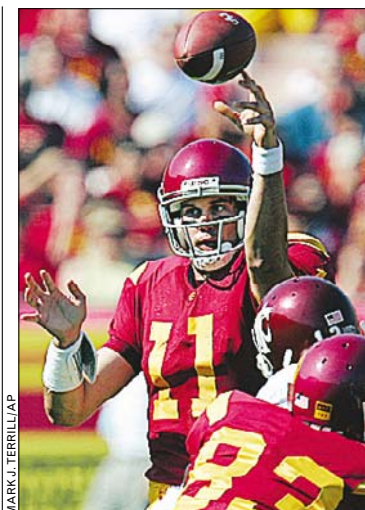

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Texas had a short stay at No. 1 in Bowl Championship Series standings.

Southern California jumped over the Longhorns on Monday, returning to first place after a one-week absence. The margin between USC and Texas is still small — only .0038 — though up from last week when the margin separating first and second was the slimmest in the eight-year history of the BCS.

Third-place Virginia Tech gained on the top two, but the Trojans and Longhorns remain on course for a Rose Bowl showdown.

The top five teams in the BCS are unbeaten, with Alabama fourth and UCLA moving up a spot to fifth. It's the second straight season that the BCS top 10 has five unbeaten teams with five weeks to go in the regular season.

Notre Dame (5-2), which needs to finish the season with nine wins and a top-12 finish in the BCS standings to be eligible for the Sugar, Orange or Fiesta bowls, is 14th. RALPH D. RUSSO (AP)

Fan Pleads Innocent After Ball Snatch

NFL | The fan who ran out of the stands and snatched a football from Brett Favre's hand pleaded innocent to a variety of charges at his arraignment Monday, while the Bengals promised not to let it happen again.

Gregory Gall, 31, of Cincinnati, is accused of resisting arrest, trespass and disorderly conduct while intoxicated. The Bengals are reviewing their security measures to prevent a repeat of Gall's run on the field, which interrupted the final minute of Cincinnati's 21-14 win over the Green Bay Packers.

Favre took a snap from center when Gall ran onto the field, approached Favre from behind, snatched the ball from his throwing hand and ran to the other end of the field with security guards in pursuit. He was finally tackled and taken from the field. (AP)

Can Eat Just One

New calorie-control foods meet demand for moderate snacks

NUTRITION | With food portions and waistlines expanding, food companies are doing the calorie-counting for consumers by selling snacks that are about 100 calories each.

Kellogg's this year launched its 100-calorie Right Bites chocolate chip and Sandies cookies, following Nabisco's introduction of 100-calorie snacks last year and Jell-O's recent Sundae Toppers at 110 calories a cup. General Mills offers a microwavable packet that cooks up 100 calories worth of butter popcorn.

The sudden desire for moderation marks a pivotal reversal in a 40-year trend where consumers happily gobbled down ever-ballooning portions, said David Levitsky, a professor of nutrition and psychology at Cornell University. Now with about two-thirds of U.S. adults overweight, and almost half of those considered obese, health officials are targeting portion sizes as a culprit.

According to the National Institutes of Health, the average bagel 20 years ago was 3 inches in diameter and 140 calories; today it's 6 inches and about 350 calories.

And people don't think twice about finishing a "serving" — no matter how big.

"People eat in packages. We eat

Dieters say 100-calorie, single-serve portions help them control their snacking.

what's on our plate," Levitsky said. "There's this view that if someone determines a portion that's appropriate, we eat it."

The government recommends a daily intake of about 1,600 calories for women and 2,200 for men. But people can unwittingly inhale half that amount when eating cookies or chips.

Depending on the success of Right Bites, Kellogg's plans to expand on the four varieties that were introduced this summer, company officials said. Nabisco meanwhile has already expanded its 100-calorie pack lineup to include Oreo Thin Crisps, Cheese Nips and Honey Maid Graham Crackers.

The portion-control packaging is popular because it responds to dual trends in the food industry — the desire for convenience and healthier options, said Todd Hultquist, spokesman for the Food Marketing Institute in Washington. Giving people nice, round numbers like 100 to work with makes it easier to count calories.

America's appetite for snacks is growing. Americans now consume about 25 percent of their daily calories from snacks, up from 20 percent a decade ago, largely because of the growing number of products, Levitsky said.

While the smaller portions are a good alternative to oversized bags of chips and cookies, Levitsky cautioned they could trigger a binge.

That's what happened to Jill O'Malley, who tried the 100-calorie packs about a year ago.

"I ended up eating six bags," O'Malley said. Now she's just banished the treats altogether rather than tempt herself with a taste.

It's fine, but still hard to walk. I thought Pilates might be easier, but can't afford classes. Do you know of any good Pilates tapes?

Winsor Pilates has a wonderful series that helps you ease into Pilates. There's a training tape to learn how to do the moves, a 20-minute workout and a longer workout. You can get them at collagevideo.com. What I like about this Web site is that you can see clips of videos before you buy them. You might also check out your local video store, Netflix and even your public library.

Where can I find one of those giant rubber exercise balls — the ones you sit on for balance? Do the balls come pre-inflated or do you have to inflate them yourself?

You inflate them yourself with a little pump that comes with them. You can get the ball on-line, at sporting goods stores and even at Whole Foods. The first one I bought was fine for exercise, but was way too small for sitting at a desk. So depending on what you want to do with them, pay attention to the size. Expect to spend about $20 to $30.

Modern Mouse Age

Disney keeps its sky from falling with a digital 'Chicken Little'

TECHNOLOGY | Like a chick leaving the nest, Disney is taking its first solo flight in computer animation with "Chicken Little."

Loosely based on the classic children's tale, "Chicken Little" marks a milestone for a studio that has led the way in traditional hand-drawn animation for nearly 70 years.

Disney isn't completely new to the technology. It has utilized computer animation in its movies as far back as 1985's "The Black Cauldron" and it had a long and successful, but ultimately tumultuous relationship with Pixar. But Disney's own animation division stuck with a traditional hand-drawn style well after competing studios converted to the more popular digital technology.

Directed by Mark Dindal, "Chicken Little" combines clever storytelling with groundbreaking technology. (It will even be shown in 3-D at some theaters.) Its cast of actors includes Zach Braff, Garry Marshall, Joan Cusack, Don Knotts, Patrick Stewart and Adam West.

The film serves up a satirical twist on the age-old fable about a chicken who proclaims that the sky is falling after being conked on the head by an acorn.

In Disney's version, the story picks up a year after "the unfortunate acorn incident." Chicken Little (voiced by Braff) is trying to restore his reputation among the animals of Oakey Oaks. Most importantly, he wants to earn the respect of his father, Buck Cluck (Garry Marshall), a gruff and frustrated ex-ballplayer.

Chicken Little signs up to play for the local baseball team and manages to score the winning run, which makes him the toast of the town. But soon after, he is hit on the head once again. This time, the sky really is falling. Fearful of once again being labeled crazy, he enlists the help of his closest pals in an attempt to save the day without sending the town into a new panic.

Though better known as a filmmaker ("Pretty Woman," "The Princess Diaries"), Marshall enjoyed leaving the technical part up to Dindal and his team.

"I was most impressed that when I was watching the animation, I was moved by it. You get emotionally involved — and it's a chicken, for heaven's sake!" ANGELA DAWSON (VNU ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

Santana's Black Magic

With 'All That I Am,' the guitarist keeps his comeback momentum

MUSIC | Carlos Santana could jam with your cell phone's ring tone and make it sound meaningful. Let's hope his career doesn't come to that.

"All That I Am" (J), the third installment in his partnership with Clive Davis' J Records (due in stores Tuesday) echoes his 1999 career-rejuvenating "Supernatural" and its 2002 successor "Shaman" in its collaborations with stars, some making return appearances (Michelle Branch), most trading notes with him for the first time.

Album producers Davis and Santana drop in a surprise or two as they continue to treat the "Supernatural" formula as a musical bible. Aerosmith's Steven Tyler isn't the first person you'd think to pair with Santana, but as he opens up and screeches on the rock ballad

FOR THE KIDS: Santana's sinuous rock continues to please new fans and old.

"Just Feel Better," his voice becomes human counterpart to the sound of Santana's electric guitar.

"American Idol's" Bo Bice rocks on "Brown Skin Girl," a failed attempt at cross-culturalism that comes off as romantic racism. Black Eyed Peas rapper Will.i.am taps the Santana feel-good spiritual vibe in the self-esteem workout "I Am Somebody," but it's the hip-hop energy Mary J. Blige and OutKast's Big Boi bring to "My Man" that makes the most of the assembled talent by relying on musical inspiration rather than marquee power.

Can you hear me now?

The New Look of Love?

Burt Bacharach, master of musical mellow, gets tough

NEW TUNE | A new album titled "At This Time" arrives in stores today with some intriguing attributes. Hip-hop beats crafted by Dr. Dre on three tracks; politically charged lyrics; and a record label that stepped in to ask the artist to tone down the raw language.

That artist is none other than 77-year-old Burt Bacharach, a songwriter best known for his polished love songs and elegant orchestrations.

"I know, I know, all of this is going to surprise some people," Bacharach said. "I wanted to take some chances. There are things I needed to say."

To say these things required some seven-minute mini-operas, a 35-piece orchestra, three hip-hop producers, Elvis Costello, Rufus Wainwright, jazzman Chris Botti and, for the first time in Bacharach's long and illustrious career, lyrics he wrote himself.

Who knew the cheerful-looking fellow behind the piano was so angry? Take the most indignant track, "Who Are These People?": "This stupid mess we're in just keeps getting worse/So many people dying needlessly/Looks like the liars may inherit the earth/Even pretending to pray and getting away with it."

Not exactly "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head." The songwriter admitted politics have never really been part of his personal composition.

"Who Are These People?" ends with Costello, in his best pinched-rage voice, singing: "See things really have to change/Before it's too late."

But in the studio the song had a different ending involving the f-word. Bacharach was persuaded by label executives to put a less spiky ending on a lushly orchestrated track.

"But I loved the way it sounded." The songwriter repeated the original line a few times, savoring the phonetic charge.

"We should have left it in. That line says it all." GEOFF BOUCHER (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

NICE WORK: Comedy Central has not only renewed comic Carlos Mencia's stand-up show, "Mind of Mencia," but the cable net built a one-hour special and live tour into his deal. It will also release an uncensored DVD of the show's first season.

Viewers Not Drawn to Crime

Prime-time's bigfoot crime procedurals are seeing lower numbers

RATINGS | The nation's crime wave — the one on TV — may have peaked.

Ratings for some of prime time's top crime shows have slumped this fall, raising suspicions about the genre that sustained network drama departments for years before

"Desperate Housewives" and "Lost" came along.

Executives say that procedurals still have plenty of life. But there are growing signs of a shakeout on the way. "Law & Order" has seen a 16 percent slide among the young-adult audience compared with last year. "CSI: New York" has shed an alarming 29 percent of its young-adult audience, although it's still the most-watched program in the time slot. CBS' "CSI: Miami" and Even the original "CSI," which sparked the forensics craze, has lost viewership.

NBC's "Law & Order: Criminal Intent" have each slipped 19 percent in viewers ages 18 to 49.

"There are too many procedurals," said "Law & Order" creator and executive producer Dick Wolf. "Most of these shows will go away over the next couple of years."

Wolf's "Law & Order" may be a victim of its own success because it inspired a host of other procedurals that now threaten its existence.

But Wolf doesn't have too much cause to worry. NBC is already working with him on another series — a procedural about assistant district attorneys called "Conviction."

Working Out

As men age, they need to change the ways they exercise

Drew Woodmansee prides himself on being in shape. The San Diego lawyer played baseball in college and stays fit by running and cycling. He faithfully keeps his appointments with his trainer. But as he eases into his mid-30s, Woodmansee is noticing minor "knots and aches and pains," he said.

As men age, their fitness needs change. The all-out basketball games played at 20 aren't so painless played at 36. During middle age, weight begins to creep up as metabolism slows, and the fat that puddles around the midsection threatens the heart and other organs.

It's vital, however, for men to keep exercising to maintain good health. One study, published last year in the Journal of Applied Physiology, found men ages 65 to 79 who did regular physical activity had far stronger immune systems than those of a sedentary control group. A separate Canadian study of 19,000 men discovered that those who exercised and were fit cut their risk of death by heart disease in half.

Men in their 20s are at the peak of their strength. That's why many head for the gym and load up on weights, sometimes neglecting the cardiovascular aspects of their workout. But cardio is necessary at this stage to maintain heart and lung health.

Throughout their 20s and early 30s, men also aren't giving much thought to things like warming up and stretching, said Dr. Jordan Metzl, a sports medicine physician at the Hospital for Special Surgery in New York City. "They're not seeing as much in terms of body decay," he said, "so they're not as good about doing preparation and cross training — even though they should."

At this stage, men should incorporate a variety of sports and activities into their cardio and weight routines, said Justin Price, a trainer who owns BioMechanics studio

CEDRIC BRYANT
AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EXERCISE
SAYING THAT A MAN'S MIDLIFE FITNESS
ROUTINE SHOULD BE VARIED

in San Diego. "Variety is important for cardio and weight-bearing exercises," he explained, so the body doesn't get used to the same repetitive movements.

He advocates sports such as basketball or soccer, or activities such as kickboxing, all of which involve explosive movements as well as body rotation.

A sedentary lifestyle can creep up on guys in their 20s and 30s if they don't adhere to a regular fitness program. If competitive sports become too strenuous or even dangerous, experts recommend segueing to less-demanding activities such as exercise classes, running or cycling.

Opting for sensible exercises over contact sports becomes increasingly important as men hit middle age.

"This is a time when I hope a man's underlying motivation for exercise might start to be a bit more mature," said Cedric

Bryant, chief exercise physiologist for the American Council on Exercise. "Think about why you exercise and start to look at the overall health benefits of being physically active."

Developing a consistent workout that includes cardiovascular and strength training should be paramount, he said, to keep weight down and muscles strong.

Men typically gain abdominal weight, which puts them at higher risk for heart disease and diabetes.

Maintaining flexibility is vital as well, said Bryant: "That only gets more important with each passing year." Yoga and Pilates are two disciplines designed to keeping joints supple, which helps prevent injury.

Citrus Crop Faces 'Greening' Peril

Food

Insect-borne bacteria could suck the life out of Fla. industry

A tiny, disease-ridden insect lands on a bright green leaf of a healthy grapefruit tree, sucks out some nutrients and flutters away to the next plant.

In that instant, the once-productive tree begins its slow death. Its veins and stems are gradually choked by a bacteria that causes citrus greening, a worldwide threat to citrus plants that today, along with citrus canker, menaces Florida's $9 billion industry.

The first U.S. discovery of the devastating disease was reported last month. Since then, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, state scientists, university researchers and citrus growers have begun grappling with the newest foe to Florida's famous and economically vital oranges, grapefruits and tangerines.

"It's devastating. It's just hard to comprehend," said Scott Hurley, vice president of Becker Indian River Fruit Company.

Unlike canker, which creates unsightly lesions on fruit, the citrus greening disease is deadly to crops. It already has infected and killed trees in Southeast Asia and Africa and had started attacking crops in Brazil, the world's largest producer of oranges, before being detected in

“We have responded very quickly. We have already done as much as humanly possible to deal with this thing.”

RICHARD MIRANDA

ON THE THREAT OF CITRUS GREENING

Florida in September.

The average productive life span of trees in areas affected by citrus greening has dropped from 50 or more years to 15 or less. There is no known cure for the disease, which does not harm humans.

"The major thing is that it affects the productivity of the tree and the quality of the fruit," said Ronald Brlansky, professor of plant pathology at the Citrus Research and Education Center.

Experts are still debating what's the most effective way to combat citrus greening. Some say the disease cannot be eradicated and that efforts should be directed at keeping it from spreading to uninfected regions. Others insist it's too soon to determine the best solution.

Canker surfaced in Florida more than 10 years ago and is moved by wind-blown rain. Greening, however, is spread by a tiny insect called a psyllid. Officials said the disease probably arrived in Florida from infected Asian plant material.

The disease affects the vascular system of the trees, eventually killing them. The fruit becomes lopsided and tastes bitter, rendering it unusable.

Officials are concerned that the disease has spread throughout the state and perhaps traveled outside

Florida on infected psyllids that hitch a ride on ornamental host plants that are commonly shipped to retailers.

A sick tree will not show symptoms for a couple of years — and even when signs of the disease are present, samples still must be removed for lab testing because the telltale mottling and yellow discoloration can be evidence of other problems.

It has moved from Miami-Dade north to Broward, then to Palm Beach, Hendry and Martin counties, said Richard Miranda, spokesman for the state Division of Plant Industry. "We have responded very quickly," Miranda said. "We have already done as much as humanly possible to deal with this thing."

No eradication or control strategy has been devised yet because of several unanswered questions, such as: How far has the disease spread? How many trees have the disease?

"We don't know what to do," said Hurley of Becker Indian River Fruit Company, which has 13,000 acres of citrus. "Nobody has come up with any kind of guidelines. It's just a guessing game right now."

What Didn't Work

✱ A look at fall's hits and misses

PUT DOWN THAT CREDIT CARD and step away from the cash register. These days, one of the surest routes to becoming a fashion victim may be listening to what the designers and pundits proclaim is "in" — weeks before anyone knows what's catching on with shoppers.

With 10 weeks of autumn left to go, we went in search of what's flopped — and what's really catching on.

Form-fitting pencil skirts were an "essential" fall trend, according to one fashion magazine. Now, retailers say the skirts have been overshadowed by fuller — and, not incidentally, more comfortable — flowing designs.

Among other misfires: military-style jackets, typically with brass buttons. Pointy, high-heeled boots aren't all faring well, either. And then there's the poncho.

Among this season's success stories are women's platform shoes, which are lower and more subtle than their 1970s predecessors. Platforms can make your legs look longer and can be more comfortable than stilettos.

Derek Lam, Anna Sui and Roberto Cavalli all sent models down the runway wearing fur vests this year. Midprice retailers are now carrying them, too. J. Crew has a navy-blue vest with a coyote-fur-trimmed hood ($188) that is similar to a $650 vest with a coyote lining from Adam+Eve.

For women with long legs, cropped pants can be particularly flattering. Their length and shape call attention to the calves. But they're not necessarily for everyone. "They're a little hard to wear," said Carolyn Gustafson, a Raleigh, N.C., consultant who shops for executives at companies like Pfizer and Wachovia.

Still, retailers say they're pleased with the results so far. BCBG Max Azria says its wide-legged gaucho pants, named for the uniform of 19th-century Argentine cowboys, are outselling its regular pants.

Ponchos might not be selling, but long, thick, homespun-looking cardigans are. Part of the appeal of these sweaters is that they can do double duty as jackets in milder fall weather. Choose one proportional to your height; anything longer than mid thigh will look as if you've walked out in your bathrobe. RACHEL DODES (AP)

GO AWAY, GAUCHO:

← Gaucho pants (like these by Anna Sui) are an unfortunate and hard-to-wear hit.

Beauty

Singing in the Shine

"Sweet Charity" is shining on Broadway this fall. The musical, starring Christina Applegate, partnered with Avon to create its own lip gloss called SHINE SUPREME (on sale for $4, avon.com). The line's color palette complements the psychedelic 1960s' costumes of "Charity," and its self-renewing shine cuts down on the need for touchups — a timesaver for Applegate and her Fandango Ladies. The Post's MICHAEL WILBON was online Monday and discussed the Redskins' 36-0 loss to the Giants on Sunday | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Is it time to start worrying about the defense? The missed tackles and bad pursuit angles have happened for five games in a row. I think the other teams are starting to figure out our blitz packages.

I think the key is people perhaps figuring out the blitz packages. Too many missed tackles killed the Redskins in Denver. The defense had a bad quarter here and there, but never an entire game until [Sunday]. They were dreadful on every level.

As a Skins fan I'm disappointed but not worried. The Giants play great at home and poorly on the road. Let's not forget the Skins are only one game out of first.

I agree with you to a degree. You'll only know if it's nothing to worry about if they bounce back and beat a very vulnerable Eagles team, at home, which the Redskins ought to be able to do.

Redskins: half-empty or half full? Like this question: half full.

We've got what should be a hell of a game this Sunday between the Skins and the Eagles. But I don't know what to make of either team after [Sunday's] game. Has the rest of the league figured out Philly or just taken advantage of Donovan's immobility in the pocket?

I don't know either. That's the fun of Sunday night's upcoming game. Who the hell knows? Clearly, Donovan is hurting and doesn't have any real mobility — not just in the pocket, but period. We've seen quarterbacks over the years give it what they had at the time and while here and there it's enough to get by, usually it isn't. I just don't want Donovan to suffer a more serious injury.

What is your prediction on the Skins final record? 8-8? 7-9?

I said 9-7 and I'll stick with that for now. A win Sunday would have had me thinking 10-6, but they didn't.

Saying Goodbye to Parks

I TOOK PART IN HISTORY Sunday night. I stood in line with Deanna, a close friend of mine, to pay respects to a civil rights matriarch. We arrived at the Mall at 6 p.m. As we walked block after block — unable to locate the end of the line — Deanna and I momentarily reconsidered.

We decided to get in line and wait it out. Even with the knowledge that we were not adequately dressed for the dropping temperatures, we stayed. We introduced ourselves to the group we were now a part of — Maurice, Keith, Kimberly, Suzette. To keep ourselves occupied, we shared stories and favorite recipes, talked about our professions, our views on the war, the Bush administration, the state of the black community. We stood with bankers, teachers, technology analysts. We joined in the songs echoing around the Mall — "Lift Every Voice and Sing," "We Shall Overcome" and many others.

I glanced at my watch as I crossed the threshold of the Capitol entrance: 1:23 a.m.

We entered the line to circle the small wooden casket that held the body of a powerful woman. It was breathtakingly peaceful. We stood in a circle, held hands and said a short prayer — for Rosa Parks' family, for our families, for ourselves. We paid our respects to Parks, a woman small in stature but undeniably great in presence, strength and will.

In an interview in the newest issue of Vanity Fair, WOODY ALLEN says his relationship with wife SOON-YI PREVIN, which has a "more paternal feeling," is "one of the truly lucky things that happened to me in my life." Allen married Previn in 1997; she is the adopted daughter of Andre Previn and Mia Farrow. In 1992, Allen was found to be having an affair with Previn, then 22, while he was dating Farrow. "I'm sure there are things that I might have done differently," he said. (AP)

When did Trump learn that she intended to bump him off his own show? "I don't think he ever knew," Stewart tells the magazine. (AP)
